MORTUARY MEDALS OF GEORGE WHITEFIELD.

George Whitefield, the co-founder with Wesley of Methodism in America, was born in Gloucester England, Dec. 16, 1714. In 1737 he came to America at the solicitation of Wesley, his fellow student at Pembroke College, Oxford, where both had been enthusiastic members of the "Holy Club" in which the denomination of Methodism took its rise. His impressive oratory, and the earnestness with which he expounded the doctrines of christianity soon gained for him a position of great influence among the masses of the people, and his labors bear to-day abundant fruits in the development of the Methodist Church in America to a position second to none in the number, character, and intelligence of its members.

George Whitefield died at Newburyport, Mass., Sept. 30, 1770. He was to preach there on the day of his death, his last sermon having been delivered at Exeter, N. H., on the day previous, but death came at 6 o'clock in the morning. His remains were placed in a vault under the pulpit of the "Old South Church," corner of Federal and School Sts., and to this day the curious may still see the remains of this great divine, shrunken to a skeleton with patches of skin and hair adhering here and there. The medals described, especially in the legends, are characteristic of the religious fervor which animated the people of a century ago. Nos. 1, and 2, bear the name or initial letters of Holloway, the English medalist; Nos. 3, 4, and 5, of rather inferior workmanship, may be American copies of the former. All are in the cabinet of Prof. Chas. E. Anthon, New York.

NUMISMATIC GOSSIP.

The delay in the publishing of the July number of the American Journal of Numismatics was caused by a fire in the printing rooms of T. R. Marvin & Sons. Nearly the entire edition was destroyed by fire or water, and the number had to be reprinted.—After reading the reviews of the Bushnell sale in the American Journal, and in Mason's Coin Collectors' Journal, our Quaker friends will no longer pray exclusively for Numisma. They will put in a plea now and then for those papers, and don't let them forget Charley with his big journal, he needs it too.—A copy of this number of Numisma will be sent to any collector's address given us by COINS FOR SALE.

All my business being done by correspondence, collectors near and far have an equal opportunity of securing fine and rare specimens at reasonable prices. The following splendid selections would form the nucleus of at least four good public sales, but I prefer, in this instance at least, to deal directly with buyers. The coins offered can be sent to well known collectors for inspection, if desired, the express or postage charges, both ways, to be paid by them; but it is asked that no coins be sent for except those actually wanted, if found to conform with descriptions.
